$60K in Holiday Hug Grants Awarded to 15 HIV Groups in Florida

The Campbell Foundation provides the HIV grants to help make up for funding losses since COVID.

In this most wonderful time of the year, 15 HIV nonprofits in Florida each received a $4,000 Holiday Hug grant from The Campbell Foundation, an organization based in Fort Lauderdale known for supporting HIV research. What's more, AIDS Healthcare Foundation is providing matching grants for five of the awards.

"The last couple of years have put a financial strain on many organizations serving the HIV/AIDS community, not only as a direct result of COVID, but also because funding and donations they have received in the past have dried up," said the Campbell Foundation's executive director, Ken Rapkin, in a press statement. "These organizations provide community members with everything from bus passes to get to their doctor appointments to housing, help navigating insurance issues and food security and we are proud to be able to assist them in fulfilling their mission."

The Holiday Hug grants provides organizations with unrestricted funds to use as they see fit, whether it's providing HIV testing, support services, education or other programs.

Below are the 15 Holiday Hug grantees. Those marked with an asterisk received matching funds from AIDS Healthcare Foundation.
