

Protesters Demand More HIV/AIDS Services in Mississippi

May 1, 2012

Activists in Biloxi, Mississippi, held a protest demanding an increase to HIV/AIDS services from the South Mississippi AIDS Task Force (SMATF), WLOX reports. The small group of protesters alleged that SMATF had not written a successful grant in the past year. Protesters also asked for access to a peer counselor. The SMATF board president said she has talked with clients about their concerns and that the executive director has received at least six grants during the past year.
