Drugstore Robber Threatens Employees With HIV in Canada

April 5, 2012

One of two men involved in an armed robbery in Bay Bulls, Canada, claimed to have HIV and told employees he would stick them—by which police believe he meant that he would “stick them with a needle,” VOCM reports. The other man involved in robbing Kennedy’s Family Drugs threatened employees with a knife. One 22-year-old man has been arrested for the crime and is scheduled to appear in court on charges of armed robbery, uttering threats and two breaches of probation.
