N.Y. High School to Give Away Free Condoms After Prom

May 29, 2012

Administrators at the Bedford-Stuyvesant Preparatory High School in Brooklyn, New York, are continuing a national trend by making condoms available to students at the prom, MSNBC.com reports. The principal of the high school said that he wanted teens to have the option to take condoms as they leave. The prom night policy is in line with the school's existing sex education initiatives, which distribute free condoms. Other New York City high schools allow students to request free condoms as part of HIV/AIDS prevention programs.
