

L.A. LGBT Center Lambasts County for Gutting HIV Prevention Funds Ahead of Federal Decisions

But an LA County supervisor counters that the Trump administration is the one cutting HIV prevention funding, not the county.

The Los Angeles LGBT Center received “an official notice from the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health terminating their HIV and STI prevention contracts to community-based organizations, including an annualized $3.8M to the Los Angeles LGBT Center,” the organization reported in a May 5 release.

The notice prompted the Center’s CEO Joe Hollendoner to release a statement and related social media posts decrying the funding cuts, which will take effect by the end of this month.

In response, Lindsey P. Horvath, who represents the third district on the L.A. County Board of Supervisor posted on X:

“Let’s be clear: LA County is not the one cutting HIV prevention funding--the Trump admin is. The designated HIV-prevention $ the County sends to our partners comes directly from the federal govt. The new admin has completely abandoned its promises to fund this life-saving work.”

Indeed, several commenters to the LBGT Center’s Instagram post pointed out that the funding cuts were a result of the Trump White House, not L.A. County. “The Los Angeles LGBTQ community who cares about HIV prevention should note that HIV prevention grants were canceled by our federal administrators at HHS [the Department of Health and Human Services] and the oval office,” wrote _stevenrmartin. “The county Does not have the grant money to award. Joe Hollander’s quote directing the outrage of the Los Angeles community is misdirected and willfully ignorant of the facts.”

Others tried to raise larger issues and seek solutions. As erixfilming wrote, “Obviously we can’t just rely on the government anymore, what’s going on in the country has shown us that, so you guys and us should be doing everything we can to supplement revoked funding.”

Below is the full statement posted on LALGBTCenter.org attributed to Hollendonor:

“We are sounding the alarm: Los Angeles County’s decision to eliminate HIV prevention services now is a direct threat to public health. It will fuel a surge in new HIV transmissions, deepen existing health disparities, and saddle the County with far greater long-term costs. We demand that the Department of Public Health and the Board of Supervisors immediately reverse these reckless terminations and honor their contractual funding commitments.

“The County’s decision to terminate all HIV prevention and STI contracts puts lives at risk and threatens to undo decades of hard-won progress in the fight against the HIV epidemic. At a time when local leadership should be standing up to the Trump administration’s efforts to dismantle public health infrastructure, the County is instead choosing to act prematurely— defunding life-saving services for countless Angelenos who rely on them.

“County leadership has yet to provide a clear justification for this reckless decision—and the community deserves full transparency and accountability. While there have been modest reductions in CDC funding, the wholesale elimination of HIV prevention contracts raises serious questions. No other major jurisdiction facing similar federal threats has taken such an extreme and damaging step. What is happening in Los Angeles County demands further investigation, and the outcry from the community is wholly justified.

“Failure to reinstate funding will result in an immediate and harmful crisis for communities most impacted by public health disparities, especially LGBTQ+ and BIPOC communities. Services like HIV testing, STD screening, PrEP navigation, and community education will likely cease, and the County will undoubtedly experience a resurgence in new HIV cases. This decision will trigger a public health crisis and drive up long-term costs for the County, as investing in HIV prevention is far more cost-effective than the lifelong expense of treating someone living with HIV/AIDS.

“Adding further insult to injury, this abrupt decision puts hundreds of dedicated public health workers at risk of losing their jobs. These are trusted frontline staff—many from the very communities most impacted by HIV—who have spent their careers building relationships, saving lives, and advancing health equity. Now, because of unclear reasoning, they face unemployment, and the communities they serve risk being abandoned.

“If the County has truly lost federal funding at a level that warrants terminating all HIV prevention contracts, its leadership should be working overtime with the State, elected officials, and community partners to secure emergency support and fill the gap. Instead, last week’s actions revealed a troubling lack of commitment to HIV prevention—and to the very communities most at risk for the virus.

“Rest assured—the Los Angeles LGBT Center community and its partners will not stay silent. We will draw on the full force of our movement’s legacy of resistance, of acting up and fighting back against injustice. This shameful decision will not go unanswered. Lives are on the line, and we refuse to let County leaders turn their backs on the people they serve. Silence will not—must not—equal death.”
