Zero Discrimination Day 2014

February 28, 2014

POZ supports Zero Discrimination

The first Zero Discrimination Day will be commemorated Saturday, March 1, according to a statement by the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), which launched this new awareness day.

The event is a call to people worldwide to promote the right of individuals to full lives with dignity, regardless of their appearance, where they live or whom they love. The symbol for the day is the butterfly, which represents transformation.

UNAIDS has called on organizations and individuals around the globe to support their efforts. They encourage people to download a butterfly from their website, take a picture of yourself holding it and post it on their Facebook wall or other social media.
