The Harlem Book Fair was founded by Max Rodriguez in 1998 when he realized there was no public celebration of writing or writers, right in the home of the Harlem Renaissance. The Vision of the Harlem Book Fair is to partner with local and national leadership organizations under the banner of literacy awareness, affirming HBF as the nation's largest African American literary event celebrating family literacy, community empowerment, and community cooperation. Newark is joining other cities that host the event like Atlanta, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Boston & Hempstead. The event in Harlem draws over 50,000 people and over 250 vendors. The Harlem Book fair in Newark will be on MLK Blvd from Central Ave to Warren Street (rain or shine) on April 28. Accompanying the event, will be other events that include readings, poetry, lectures and more on the 27th and 28th. Most events will take place at Rutgers-Newark.

Newark, New Jersey's largest city already is home to arts and cultural venues, six universities and the Dodge Poetry Festival, and many of the state's largest corporations. Dr. Clement A. Price, Rutgers Board of Governors Distinguished Service Professor, is chairperson of the Newark fair, while Wilma Grey, director of the Newark Public Library, is Newark event director. www.harlembookfair.com For more specific information contact Max Rodriguez, 914-231-6778, or Carla Capizzi, 973/353-5263.
